Ah! Jesus had not where to lay his head, And shaped for man a prayer for daily bread. Heaven's Great King here suffered, with no to-Or care for earthly riches; and He taught, In symbols like the lilies of the field, That mun should trust to what God's care doth yield He chose unsordid hearts, the low and meek, To bear his spirit and givinely speak; And, though He made and owned the universe, Bade them go forth with neither scrip nor purse. Heaven He proclaimed the poor's who strive to win And showed how hardly rich men enter in. He shared and blessed an equal state for man, As level ranks run through all nature's plan. Mer herds and flocks and swarms she daily feeds, And yields the summer's fruit for winter's needs, tweet instinct music swells from sylvan shades, And common weal her even law pervades strains from service, and the ruler turns Though God gives ample bousties without sin-the greed of one man makes a bundred lack. Who's wiser, God or man? The truth is clear, That man bolds but a fifful tenure here. bole cities crumb e in the earthquake's sbock His fleets are tempest-tossed on strand and rock: O'er all the world his ruised temples stand; His helpless bones lie hesped in sea and land; Disease, defeat and blight all crowd his way, And in all earthly things he reads decay.

And in all earthly things he reads decay.

Refuses succor to a brother's need!
What fools to drag their gold to the grave's brink.
Then feel their souls gam-burdened, downward sink!
Ah! in all issues of poor human strife,
Naught brings pure joy like a kind, minist'ring life.
Man's mission ites in goodness, mercy, love—
These, nurtured here, immortal bloom above.
Then, O be patient—hope! No golden key
Unlocks the heavens as doth adversity.
Seek not the mountain-heights, where verdure falls,
But walk 'mid fruits and flowers of level values.
'Tis not proud idle pompt that Gold doth bless. Tis not proud idle pomp that God doth bless But toll and service bring most happiness. God cherished in the heart makes it unselfish, and unselfishness is the very soul and substance of true benevolence. The unrenewed heart is in love with all things. When it finds delight in the higher and purer objects of an earthly character, it is as the result of bapty social condition and culture. Its selfishness is the same, but only less unlovely in human sight than that of the heart filled with low desires and wedded to correspondngly unworthy objects. When, now, the love of God is shed abroad in the heart, whether of the naturally virtuous, or of the demonstratively wicked man, it works quite as radical a change in the former as in the latter, and this change, in either case, requires the emmiostence of God's grace to effect it.-[Chicago Standard.

Man's Age.

Few men die ef age Almost all die of disappointment, passion, mental or bodily toil, or accident. The passions kill men sometimes, even suddenly. The common expression, choked with passion, has little exaggeration in it; for even though not suddenly fatal, strong passions shorten life. Strong bodied men otten die young - weak men live longer than the strong, for the strong use their strength and the weak have none to use. The latter take care of themselves, the former do not. As it is with the body, so it is with the mind and temper. The strong are apt to break, or, like the candle, to run; the weak to burn out. The inferior animals which live, in general, regular and temperate lives, have generally their prescribed term of years. The horse lives twenty-five years; the ox fifteen or twenty; the lion about twenty: the dog ten or twelve; the rabbit eight; the guinea-pig six or seven years. These numbers all bear a similar proportion to the time the animal takes to grow to its full size, But man, of the animals, is one that seldom comes up to this average. He ought to live a hundred years, according to this physiological law, for five times | twenty are one hundred; but instead of that, he scarcely reaches, on an average, four times his growing period; the cat six times; and the rabbit even eight times the standard of measurement. The reason is obvious-man is not only most irregular and the most intemperate. but the most laborious and hard-worked of all animals.
